Dementia’s Impact on Life Partnerships Explored in New Book
By Dr. Nina Krebs

What happens when the most enduring partnership of your lifetime unravels before your eyes?
Is it possible to act in the best interest of a loved one who has dementia without sacrificing your soul?

San Francisco, California, January 1, 2020 — Nina Krebs, Ed.D. with Sunwalker Studio, announces her latest title, Shades of Love and Loss: Caring for a Partner with Dementia. Krebs’ story of her personal, practical, life-affirming journey in seeing the first subtle signs of dementia in her beloved husband to her acceptance of Alzheimer’s impact on daily life is a must-read for every family caregiver facing this life-rrending challenge.

The author’s career in education and psychology affords insight and depth for her writing. Married for fifty years and mother of two daughters, she knows family life. In both a university setting and private practice, she worked as a clinician and as an organizational consultant until retirement. Then she followed her dreams as a visual artist, writer and music devotee. When her husband began his journey into the lost land of Alzheimer’s, her world tilted. Dr. Krebs forged on to comprehend her new normal. She deepened her search for meaning and embraced the project of writing another book. Nina lives in the East Bay Area of San Francisco, close to her remarkable family.

Title: Shades of Love and Loss: Caring for a Partner with Dementia
Author: Dr. Nina Krebs
Publisher: Sunwalker Studio
Genre: Non-Fiction / Self-Help / Aging
Available at Barnes and Noble, Amazon, local bookstores and libraries
Trade paperback: $14.95; e-book: $9.95
Wholesale

Media inquiries, review copy requests, and interview invitations should be directed to: sunwalkerstudio66@gmail.com

More information, interactive media, high-resolution assets, may be found on the author’s website: www.ninabkrebs.com